D,

Per our telephone call earlier, I am working on my return flight schedule to see when I can meet with you and the other guys.

In the interim, you requested that I provide you with a list of items needed to close a deal with them. To further our discussion of these needs, I have attached the two letters presented by them at our last meeting. As we have discussed, they do not have the expertise or resources to handle the type and magnitude of work they have requested in the letter option with contracts. They have presented no resume to show otherwise. Such a lack of expertise could cause great problems with our other contractors and also draw unwanted attention to this deal.

Due to these concerns, I have no choice at this point but to sign their letter option with no contracts. As this would be different from what we discussed last time, I thought we should talk. I am willing to sign it if needed to move my projects forward, but I need some confirmation from decision makers that this will take care of the requirements and make everyone happy.

Regards,

Bill
